HIGH WINDS, FREEZING COLD HITS AREA

Seen & Heard Around MURRAY

We counted ten different kinds of conch shells in the yard the other day. There must be hundreds of different kinds, because we got ten different kinds without even trying.

Junior Lampkins has some that are yellow with red centers.

We saw some the other day that are as large as the King Almonds but are pure white. We'll see if we can make some of them.

Trying to find your children in the rain when school turns out is like looking for a needle in a haystack. It would be easier if they would all slow down.

There is so much movement as they come tumbling out the door that it is hard to recognize anybody.

Interesting to us the other day was a TV program on microscopic organisms. An electronic microscope was exhibited which was hooked up with a high speed camera. The picture was shown of a virus which was magnified 100,000 times its normal size. The announcer explained that a quarter magnified the same number of times would be five miles in diameter.

Ops cell animals such as the amoeba and paramecium were magnified so they were about a foot long. It will be a boon to science.

Some professed Christians leave Christianity out of their business life if it means gaining a nickel. We were given a boost the other day when we heard an interview with Conrad Hilton, a multi-millionaire. He listed the love for God and prayer, as two of his steps to success. It's heartening to know that some big men have reached the top, still observing Christian principles in their business dealings.

General opinion is that we have had enough rain for a while.

It started raining about 5:45 Sunday morning and continued throughout the day. About 7:00 last night, as if it hadn't rained enough, there came a real gully washer.

A concrete block wall that runs along the line of Fire Chief Flavel-Robertson, gave away as the ground got too mushy, and covered up Mrs. Robertson's rose bushes.

Water was high along the railroad too. Several people said that water came in their basements for the first time.

Work is progressing on the tearing down of the houses where the new electric and water system office building will be located. Sam Calhoun's house, the next lot toward the square, is also coming down.

Sixty Six Die In Crash Of Four Engine Transport

By GEORGE REMINGTON
United Press Staff Correspondent
HONOLULU (AP) — A four-engine military transport plane crashed today on the western side of Oahu Island, killing 66 persons aboard and burning today and the Navy said there were no survivors.

The plane, which crashed atop a ridge inside the Navy's top-secret Lualaba ammunition depot about 20 miles northwest of here, carried 57 passengers and nine crewmen.

A spokesman for the Navy air-transport center said emergency crews had reached the scene of the crash and found no survivors.

It was the worst aviation disaster in the history of Hawaii.

The passenger list included two female dependents, one under 5 years old, and two civilians.

The Lualaba Naval Ammunition Depot and the nearby naval radio station is one of the most secret and heaviest guarded military installations on the island of Oahu.

It is located in a wide valley opening toward Oahu's highest peak, 4,090-foot Mt. Kaala.

A Navy spokesman said the plane caught fire after it crashed in the Waianae mountains on the western side of Oahu Island.

The crash site was 2,000 yards inside the main gate of the depot and 650 feet up the side of the mountain.

The spokesman said none of the reports reaching Pearl Harbor spoke of any survivors. However, he emphasized that this did not mean all were dead.

Rescuers Reach Scene

Military rescue teams, doctors and ambulances were at the scene.

The plane, a Navy version of the DC-4, was known by the designation R-6-D, as on a flight from Hickam Field to Moffett Field, Calif., about 30 miles south of San Francisco.

Shortly after taking off, the plane had tried to return to Hickam, possibly because of radio trouble. The exact reason was not known.

In Washington, MATS officials said the plane was on route to Travis Air Force Base, Calif., about 50 miles northeast of San Francisco.

MATS officials in the capital said all passengers were thought to be military personnel, although there might have been a couple of dependents on board.

The downed plane belonged to the MATS Navy Air Transport Squadron based at Moffett Field.

First MATS Crash

It was the first accident that the MATS unit has had since its organization in 1948. Since January, 1951, MATS has flown 1,122,450 passenger miles on 41,671 Pacific crossings without a fatality.

Today's accident took place about 20 miles northwest of Honolulu.

The plane took off from Hickam at 7:06 p.m. Monday 12:06 a.m. EST. It was reported crashed at 2:16 a.m. 7:16 a.m. EST.

It was believed the plane turned back after it was about three and one-half hours out.

Sign-Up For Rain Increase To Be Held

The Galloway County Rain Increase Committee met yesterday and concluded plans for the sign-up campaign. Next Monday, March 28, was selected as sign-up day for the county rain increase program.

Farmers may sign up at any one of several business places in the city of Murray which will be designated within the next couple of days. The cost will be calculated on the basis of five cents per acre with no additional charge for timber or waste land over the first 100 acres.

Receipts will be issued for all money received, and the money will be held in escrow by Ray Brownfield, treasurer for the committee, until participation in the program is assured or else returned to the signers.

All farmers are urged to avail themselves of the opportunity to secure this program for the county.

MOTEL IS DAMAGED BY FIRE, EXPLOSIONS

ASHLAND — Fire damage estimates to the uncompleted $330,000 Henry Clay Motel here were set at $100,000 by owner Dr. H. C. Plasing today.

Two explosions and a severe fire yesterday badly damaged the first and second stories of the 44-unit brick building. Leaking gas was blamed for the fire and the explosions.

The new motel was scheduled to open for business on April 30, but Parsons said the opening date probably will be delayed about two months.

Police Alerted To Vandalism

FRANKFORT (AP) — State police were alerted today to watch for suspicious persons in the vicinity of telephone installations in Kentucky.

Both company and CIO Communications Workers Union officials have decried cable cutting and other acts of vandalism, but more than 100 such acts have occurred in the nine states where Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Co. workers are on strike.

Company officials reported yesterday that cables were severed near Shelbyville and near Danville in Boyle County, cutting off service to the Forkland and Mitchellburg communities.

Earlier, cables were cut or partially sliced at Louisville, Paducah, Pineville and Hopkinsville. The company has offered $5,000 rewards for information leading to the arrest and conviction of individuals cutting the cables.

The telephone company still was being picketed today as some 50,000 switchboard operators, maintenance men and other employees remained on strike.

They are seeking a new contract with pay increases, health and welfare provisions and fringe benefits. The old contract expired at midnight, March 13, and the strike began the next morning.

The company expressed willingness to accept most of the union demands during negotiations preceding the strike and charge the principal issue preventing agreement is the refusal by union leaders to accept a no-strike clause.

Union officials said "The union is not saying it will not sign a no-strike clause. We are saying we will not sign a contract containing a no-strike clause unless the contract also contains full-scale arbitration rights."

The union charged that elimination of geographical wage differentials and the question of supervisors doing craft work also remained unsettled.

Boy Scout District Group Meets

A District Committee meeting of the Happy Valley District was held last night in the Community Building at Benton at 7:00 p.m.

Verne Kyle, District Chairman, presided over the two hour long meeting. Commissioners Bill Grimmett of Marshall County, Bill Pogue of Calloway County, and Rev. James Walker of Livingston County reported on a scout leaders' roundtable. They said that they felt that such roundtables were beneficial both to the county commissioners and to the leaders of the troops.

Bill Farris reported on a leadership training meeting that he recently attended.

Dave Thornton, scout executive reported that on Thursday, March 24 a meeting of scout leaders would be held in Paducah with an outstanding minister to make an address.

On April 4 and 5 council wide meetings will be held in the BZA building in Paducah. On April 16, Thornton reported, a Cub Leaders Pow-Wow will be held. This is the first pow-wow to be held in the council of Cub leaders. This meeting will be held at Bracken Junior High School from 1:00 to 9:00 o'clock.

The highlight of the meeting was a report made by chairman Verne Kyle on the recent camp development meeting held in Paducah.

Plans call for a scout camp development of the Boy Scout camp site at Kentucky Lake. Approximately one-quarter million dollars will be raised for the erection of one of the best Scout camps in the nation. Complete facilities will be built on the approximately 500 acre reservation. It was generally considered to constitute a great boost to scouting in the entire area.

Those attending from Murray were Verne Kyle, Rue Overbey, Al Kipp, Robert Moyer, William Pogue, A. W. Simons, W. B. Moser, Clarence Rohwedder, Hugh Oakley and James C. Williams.

Those from Marshall County were Bill Farris, Bill Grimmett, Bill Nelson, Bob Rider, Marshall Wyatt, Dave Thornton, Macdon Hutcheson, Clyde Kamp, O. W. Taylor, Dr. Joe Miller, Paul Darnall, Curt Phillips, B. T. Long, and Shelby McCallum.

Judge Eufan Ramage and Rev. James Walker of Smithland were there also.

Cold Wave Warning Issued For Tonight, Expect 18-20

The torrential downpours of the past several days were ended last night when the temperature took a downward plunge beginning about 11:00 p.m.

High winds rose suddenly causing some damage in the area. Several television aerials were broken and the plate glass window at Murray Motors suffered some damage. Four of the large plate glass sections were blown out by the gusty winds.

A small tornado hit South of Murray in the Buchanan, Tennessee section causing minor damage.

It is not known what damage fruit trees suffered, but if the temperature drops to below twenty tonight, extensive damage could be caused.

The Greater Cincinnati Airport near Covington recorded winds up to 60 miles per hour and Lexington's Weather Bureau said winds here were clocked at 75 miles per hour.

Worried residents in many cities called the weather bureau to see if tornadoes were in the offering, but meteorologists said Kentucky was buffeted only by very high winds.

Damage at Cincinnati alone was expected to exceed $100,000.

The Ohio River, which went backing its banks only a few days ago, also was rising rapidly from heavy rains upstream. U. S. Meteorologist O. K. Anderson said the Ohio may reach flood stage of 28 feet at Louisville late today.

The Ohio reached 27.2 feet on the upper gauge this morning only 8 feet below flood stage. Anderson said the river may crest at 30 feet at Louisville tomorrow night or early Thursday.

Several houses had their roofs blown off by the gale at Covington and Lexington, and a roof was ripped from a married student housing unit on the University of Kentucky campus.

The wind was preceded by heavy rains which registered 1.92 inches at Bowling Green, 2.22 inches at Liberty, .96 inches at Louisville and 1.10 inches at Pikeville for the past 24 hours.

Winds should continue intermittently during the day, decreasing in velocity by late afternoon or night.

The weather bureau also issued a cold wave warning with temperatures scheduled to drop below 20 degrees in most of Kentucky tonight.

A-Blast Is Triggered

By COLIN MCKINLAY
United Press Staff Correspondent
ATOP MT. CHARLESTON, Nev. (AP) — An atomic device packing less than half the punch of the Nagasaki - Hiroshima destroyers was exploded in the Nevada desert today to simulate a "beachhead" nuclear blast paving the way for a "landmark" by U. S. Marines.

Some 2,000 technicians were in trenches less than two miles from the detonation point as the Atomic Energy Commission triggered the blast. It was set off atop a 500-foot steel tower before dawn on the Nevada proving grounds, and was the sixth nuclear detonation of the 1953 test series.

Simulated Attack

Although the whirly-birds were parked on the sand and rock of Yucca Flat, in theory they were on the deck of a big carrier operating amidst an invasion fleet in a practice "approach from the sea" to an enemy position on land.

The Marines were taking part in a 36-hour maneuver, one of the longest and most complete Marine atomic maneuvers but not the first time Marines have been indoctrinated in nuclear warfare. Two years ago, 2,000 Marines participated in a smaller-scale maneuver, including helicopter operations.

The blast, set off right on schedule at 9:35 a.m. EST, had a kick estimated unofficially to be the equivalent of some 10,000 tons of TNT, compared to the Nagasaki-Hiroshima weapons which had a yield of 25,000 tons of TNT, each.

This 37th atomic detonation at the Nevada site threw out a flash of light, visible across a five-state area - California, Oregon, Nevada, Arizona, and Utah, spanning a diameter of more than 800 miles.

And its nuclear fireball, dealing death and destruction from blast-furnace heat and radiation, boiled over nearly a 10-mile diameter for five seconds, enough to wipe out any such closely-concentrated "enemy" positions.

The fireball, a hellish red at first and then fading to orange and becoming swallowed in purple, swept to within almost a mile of the marine trenches. A huge blanket of dust whipped across the site and the trenches as though a tornado were at work.

Worst Reported Story Of Year Told

By LYLE C. WILSON

United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON 19—The worst reported story of the month is just beginning to get around as the capital press corps reflects on President Eisenhower's latest expression of great admiration for Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

The occasion was the annual dinner of the White House correspondents association at the Statler Hotel 10 days ago. Hundreds of newsmen and their guests were assembled there. It is dawning on some of them now that Mr. Eisenhower chose the very public occasion to give Nixon a cheer calculated to knock down the idea that he might want to abandon him now or as a running mate in 1956.

A Plug For Nixon
Moreover, it seems now that Mr. Eisenhower might have been giving his young friend and associate a plug toward the presidential nomination itself.

Mr. Eisenhower spoke briefly and in a light vein as the dinner ended. It is not customary to record nor to make news of his remarks on such occasions. No record was made at this time.

But as those present recall it, Mr. Eisenhower spoke of being gratified that Nixon was here to take his place if anything happened to the President. He likened war to public life in Washington with himself as the commanding officer. He was pleased that Nixon was here to take over if the commander should become a battle casualty.

Nixon's Stock High
All this was before an audience which included many of the high ranking officials of the Eisenhower administration as well as top drawer Democrats who have declared war on Nixon personally for his bare knuckled use of the Communist issue in last year's political campaign. They hope to drive him out of public life.

No interpretation of Mr. Eisenhower's remarks seems possible other than that he deliberately chose an occasion when all hands could be informed that Nixon's stock was very high at the White House—that he backed Nixon and his campaign tactics 100 per cent.

HOMEMAKERS RENEW CENTURY-OLD CHAIR

A 100-year old walnut chair, renewed with much rubbing and a new, can woven cane seat, was one of several articles displayed by a fine county homemaker through the cooperation of a Earlan merchant. Among other articles receiving attention, said Mrs. Roxie Perkins, University of Kentucky home demonstration agent, was a refinished rocker that had served three generations to the U. S. Department of Agriculture and an old oil lamp, now electric.

Articles of clothing, hand-weaving and crafts completed by members of homemakers clubs, were also a part of the exhibit.

HERE'S HOW...

MAKE RADIATOR COVERS

Attractive radiator covers are welcome projects in many homes. No over-all dimensions are shown in the drawings; they will depend upon the size of the radiators.

Using 1-inch lumber, cut the side pieces to allow for the base board and molding, and the turnoff valve and pipe. The base panel arch permits air circulation. This panel is fastened to the sides with No. 9 flathead wood screws, 1 1/2 inches long, countersunk.

Add the 3/4 by 3/4 brace strips to the inside top edge of the side pieces. Fasten the top to the strips with screws from beneath.

Then add the top member and two side members of the front frame. The frame is strengthened by strap steel tie braces across each joint as shown in detail A and B.

The radiator screen should overlap the front opening by 1/4 inch all around. Use 3/4-inch screen bead molding to form a frame around the screen. Fasten the bead in place with brads.

The screen bead also may be used as edging for the top of the radiator cover.

Food Shortage Hitting East Germany, Said

By CHARLES W. McCANN
United Press Staff Correspondent

A serious food shortage has hit Communist East Germany, and Red authorities seem to be getting worried about it.

There is a wave of panic buying. Factory workers have started to protest. Agriculture Minister Paul Scholz has lost his post.

But there seems to be no remedy for the situation. It is one which is affecting not only every Russian satellite but Soviet Russia itself and its ally Communist China.

What it points to is a failure of basic Communist agricultural policies and of their application by Communist bureaucrats.

The Communists must be especially anxious over the situation in East Germany. The workers there have shown that they are not completely overawed by their 'Red masters.'

Reds Remember Riots

The Communists clearly have not forgotten the riots of two years ago, in which the East German workers rose against the imposition of speed-up production quotas.

Reports of the food shortage in Eastern Germany started to reach West Berlin several weeks ago.

Anti-Communist agencies which get reports from East German provincial newspapers, refugees, and agents maintained inside the Red zone first disclosed the situation.

On March 7, it was reported, the East German Communist Central Committee issued a directive to party workers confiding that normal supplies of meat, sugar and butter would not be available 'for several weeks.'

The party workers were told to explain in their propaganda that last year's best sugar crop had been bad and that farmers had failed to deliver their full quotas of meat and fat.

Next came reports that the Reds had cut the sale of sugar in the state-owned chain stores, that saccharine was replacing sugar in restaurants and that production of chocolate bars and premium beers of high alcoholic content had been stopped.

Bread Quality Cut

Last week news reached West Berlin that the Reds had cut the quality of bread to the lowest level reached during the war.

The Communists at first tried to deny the shortage entirely. They came around to admitting, in their newspapers, that housewives had started panic buying of flour, bread, meat and other foodstuffs, and of soap also.

The official Communist newspaper 'Neues Deutschland' disclosed that workers of the great Leuna synthetic gasoline and rubber works near Merseburg had complained that workers could not buy the food they needed.

new tax date gives a month's reprieve

You'll have thirty extra days this year to complete your income tax calculations.

Congress, when it overhauled the tax code last August, set April 15 instead of March 15 as the deadline for making final payments.

Don't put it off—put it down in writing and spare yourself that last minute pressure.

7ax Savers
how to ease pain
of medical bills
All medical expenses that are more than 3 per cent of your adjustable gross income are deductible (it used to be 5 per cent). Also, maximum medical expenses deductible have been increased to $5,000 for a single person, or $10,000 for persons filing a joint return.

Payments you make for hospital and surgical protection for your family also are deductible medical expenses. You can't, of course, deduct hospital or surgical expenses paid for by insurance.

Incidentally, the cost of medicine and drugs—including such items as aspirin, vitamins, first aid supplies—can be included as medical expenses provided they all tally up to more than 1 per cent of adjusted gross income.

THEY AGREE ON TAX CUT

SENATE MAJORITY LEADER Lyndon Johnson (D, Texas) (left), and Senate Majority Whip Earle Clements (D, Kentucky) are shown in Washington as they announced majority approval of a plan to give family heads a $20 income tax reduction plus $10 for every dependent, the revenue loss to be offset by extending corporation and excise taxes for 27 months. Tax cut beneficiaries would be the under $5,000 earners. (International)

WILL SHE FORSAKE A PRINCESS' LIFE FOR LOVE?

Princess Margaret just after her return from her tour of the Caribbean.

Attendance on the princess at events like this, the horse trials
at Badminton in 1953, led to tenderness she and Townsend feel for each other. She is in middle, with cigarette holder. In front of her is Queen Elizabeth. Bidding on royal tour with Princess.

WHETHER PRINCESS MARGARET of Britain will forsake the royal life to marry Capt. Peter Townsend, RAF hero, or renounce love for duty is a subject almost as much on British lips nowadays as was the romance of the then King Edward VIII two decades ago. He abandoned for love of a divorced woman. Townsend, now 40, is a divorced man; and "in exile" in Belgium. The princess will be 25 soon, free to wed without queen's consent. (International)

Tell Her It's MURDER

SYNOPSIS
Jim Andrus had checked out
the night before he was to have wed lovely Regina Pelham in her aunt's
New York home. He had awakened to find himself accused of the vehicular slay-ing of Regina's small son, Roger. And though he knew he'd been framed, evidence pointed to his guilt, so he'd been convicted of homicide and had served a brief prison term. But free now in New York, and aided by Police Inspector Michael Brodsky, he is bent upon clearing his name. A clue as to his actual whereabouts on that fateful night leads Andrus to the suburban home of one "Midnight Mike."
He is injured and dazed, he stumbles
upon the corpse of "Midnight Mike."
A jug before they started for the
cabin on the night Roger was rundown. In recollection the taste of the wine was sour and tart off Andrus' tongue.

CHAPTER NINE
AFTER Lulu Casserly went in with the sergeant, Susan didn't rejoin Barry, moodily reading a book in the living room. She went on into the pantry. She didn't want to talk to anyone. She was wildly angry at herself. And at Jim Andrus. If he had let her alone, if he had never come near her, she couldn't have betrayed him to the police by asking those questions about Brodsky and the silver flask.
The phone at her elbow rang.
She picked it up. A man's voice asked, "This is the Pelham house?
It is? Is Sgt. Dupasse there?"
She said, "The sergeant? Here, but he's busy. Can I take a message?"

The voice at the other end of the wire said, "Tell him I think I know where the fellow he's saying is this? Get the sergeant, will you please? It's important."
She went into the dining room.
Dupasse was there. He was just leaving it. She told Dupasse he was wanted on the phone. "In there in the pantry," she waved.
Dupasse went through the door. It was to behind him. Susan crossed the rug noiselessly and listened.

In the room in the hotel in the city, Andrus walked up and down the floor waiting for the light to fade, his eyes brightly, the rest of his face expressionless. The discovery he had made when an hour earlier had put him into him.
He hadn't been hit by a chunk of falling rock when he was bending over the dead man, match in hand, last night, he had been conked with a whiskey bottle, intact with contents. That was what had got him in the back of the head and laid him out cold. That was where the broken bottle striking the ground had come from, and the whiskey spilled on his clothes. The bottle had smashed when it came into contact with his skull. There was a sharp splinter of broken glass embedded in the cloth of his overcoat just below the collar. For the second time he had been induced into the part of a murderer.

The silver of glass in an envelope had been put down behind the medicine cabinet in the bathroom, in a chink between the back of the cabinet and the wall. It would do very well there for the present.

The room was cold, the window partly raised in readiness. It wasn't dark enough yet. He had managed to get his watch going by knocking out bits of the smashed crystal holding the hands.
There was no mystery now about Michael Brodsky's elimination.
Brodsky had been killed to keep him from giving him, Andrus, an alibi for Roger Pelham's death.
Therefore an alibi existed. It existed still in the shape of the woman with love birds and the plants and the chrono of an Italian lady, with whom he and Midnight Mike had drunk wine out of a jug before they started for the
cabin on the night Roger was run-
down. In recollection the taste of
the wine was sour and tart off An-
drus' tongue.

The door of the bedroom was locked but the lock was flimsy, and there was a crack in one of the thin panes. He went over to the window. Behind it was a wilderness of back yards and the windows of houses looking on the other street. A woman peeling onions at a sink, farther along a man reading a paper in a rocking chair. . . there was no fire escape
but directly below Andrus, a story and a half below, was the flat roof of an extension. The drop wouldn't be too bad. . .

He outlined his coat, flexed his arms, started to push the dingy curtains aside, and stopped. He had waited a little too long. The footsteps came first, then the assault on the door, three smart raps and a voice he knew, Sergeant Du-passe's voice.
"Open up, Andrus. We know you're there. Just want to ask you a couple of questions."
We. There were two of them.
He could hear the other man breathing. He returned silently to the middle of the room. His own key was in the lock inside but the door wouldn't hold long. Another demanded, a whispered consultation. Andrus made no further attempt at stealth. He raced across the floor to the window and flung it to its full height with a crash. The door was under heavy pressure.
There was a splintering sound. Behind him, the panel gave. A hand

February Recorded 8 Mine Fatalities

Frankfort, Ky.,—Eight fatalities were reported in Kentucky coal mines last month. A. D. Sisk, chief of the Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals, reported today. There were none in January.

In spite of all the effort being made to reduce accidents, from the fall of roof, five fatalities resulted from this cause, Sisk said as he cited the campaign of the Department, the U. S. Bureau of Mines, leading coal "associations," insurance companies and the United Mine Workers to reduce accidents.

"Although many agencies are continually spreading the gospel of safety, their warnings are still often going unheeded," Sisk said.

February fatalities included two from the fall of roof, five fatalities each in Harlan and Pike counties and one each in Hopkins, Leslie, Letcher and Perry counties.

WEARING OF THE GREEN

The House of Representatives opened on St. Patrick's Day with seven members present. Five of those in the pews wore something green. The other two just sat there through the prayer. At roll call later, almost everybody wore green flowers, which were passed out to the law-givers at the door. The green was a gift from somebody in the business of selling green flowers.
